Centre for Teaching, Learning and Technology

November 2014 Issue 2

Flexible Learning Open House

The idea of the flipped classroom and a related discussion on how students can create their own learning materials is not new. The Flipped Learning Open House on June 21, 2014 was, as part of the CTLT Institute.

Read More

A Space of One's Own

How can we best create learning spaces for students? Presented was a study on the University of Melbourne's Peter Senekjian, who has 17 years experience in doing just that.

Read More

Team-Based Learning: Effectively Filling Your Courses

One of the most common challenges for educators is to design courses that are engaging and effective. The concept of team-based learning (TBL) provides a framework for educators to design courses that are engaging and effective.

Read More

Looking for an Engaging Learning Resource For Your Students? Create It!

Creating learning resources involves time, effort, and resources. However, the benefits of creating engaging learning resources are well worth the effort. This article discusses various strategies for creating engaging learning resources.

Read More

CTLT Journal Clubs

Journal clubs are a great way to share ideas and insights with others who are interested in the same topic. This article provides a list of journal clubs related to teaching and learning.

Read More